Graduation Ceremonies

Monday 14 April 2003
The Arms of the University of Newcastle

The Arms of the University, granted in 1965, are based on the family crest of Lieutenant John Shortland, RN who charted the entrance to the Hunter River where Newcastle now stands. The suburb in which the University is established and its surrounds were first settled by Aboriginal people of the Awabakal Tribe. Initially, the name “Shortland” was given to the suburb. In 1992, both the campus and the surrounding suburb were formally given the name “Callaghan”, in honour of the late Sir Bede Callaghan, the Chancellor of the University from 1977 until 1989.

For those interested in heraldry, the University Arms are described officially as: Azure a Sea Horse naiant in dexter chief a representation of the constellation of the Southern Cross of five Mullets all Argent.

The Mace

The Mace is the symbol of formal authority. The Mace used today belongs to the University of Newcastle and was designed by gold and silversmith, Gerald Benney. It is made of Australian walnut and silver and its head represents an open book - the traditional symbol of learning. The Mace was a gift from the University of New South Wales to commemorate the establishment of the University of Newcastle as an autonomous institution on 1 January, 1965. It is always borne ahead of the Chancellor in the academic procession during formal ceremonies such as today's presentation of academic awards.

Message from the Vice-Chancellor and President

Dear Graduates, Family Members and Friends,

Congratulations! The University is proud to honour its graduates in today's ceremony.

 Undertaking university studies involves a commitment over a considerable period and each of you will have a well-deserved sense of achievement at having successfully completed your chosen program.

For some, the aim is to secure a career or enhance career prospects. Increasingly, too, students enrol at different stages in their lives for the rewards inherent in scholarship and study as ends in themselves and to upgrade skills and knowledge. The nature of higher education today is such that students will enter and are likely to re-enter universities as part of a continuum of learning. I look forward to future graduation ceremonies to which some of you may return to receive additional awards.

Study at university brings with it a diversity of academic and social experiences, all of which serve to broaden our horizons, intellectually, personally and in employment. In a world of growing focus on the capacity to expand outlooks and capabilities, habits of learning and a university qualification are of enduring worth, and will have positive and ongoing impacts upon your quality of life and sense of well-being.

Higher education sectors throughout the world are increasingly recognising the global nature of our endeavours. The University has encouraged growth in the number of international students and welcomes the increasing diversification of our academic, social and cultural experiences. The benefits are not only to those within the University, but to the community as a whole. To ensure that programs contribute to that diversity and broaden the relevance of students’ academic experiences, University curricula are developing international components and perspectives. I hope that you will continue to seek to broaden your international experiences in future pursuits.

I hope, too, that you have found your endeavours as a student and the interactions with other members of the University to be richly rewarding and wish you well for the future.

Message from the Warden of Convocation

Dear Graduate,

In graduating from the University, you automatically become a member of the University of Newcastle Convocation. Our first member graduated in 1966, and since then Convocation has grown to include more than 50,000 members.

Convocation is not simply an "Old Boys' and Old Girls' Union". It is an integral part of the University itself, being named in The University of Newcastle Act (just after the Council, and before the Professors!) as one of the bodies of which the University consists.

What this means in practice is that, as a graduate, you are able to lay claim to a continuing role in your University, just as you have a continuing stake (as holder of a Newcastle degree) in its well-being and reputation.

I hope that many of those who graduate today will actively take advantage of their membership of Convocation. Later in the year, you will receive notice of the Annual General Meeting, which those of you who are resident in Newcastle may be interested to attend.

Convocation's main business is carried out by its Management Committee, which meets several times a year. It organises such things as public lectures by prominent individuals, and the presentation of awards to graduates who have distinguished themselves in their particular field.

Of a less formal, more social, nature are the activities of the various Alumni Chapters which Convocation has established in a number of cities both throughout Australia and overseas. These Chapters arrange dinners, cocktail parties and reunions as well as providing networking opportunities for Newcastle graduates who have moved to another Australian city or overseas country.

If you wish to receive further information on these benefits and services, please contact:
Alumni and Convocation Co-ordinator
The University of Newcastle
Callaghan NSW 2308
Phone: (02) 4921 6459
Fax: (02) 4921 8730
Email: convocation@newcastle.edu.au

Please also use the above addresses and phone numbers to keep us informed when you change your address. We hope you will stay in touch with us, and your current address will help us stay in touch with you.

On behalf of Convocation, let me congratulate you on obtaining your degree and wish you all the best for your future.

Emeritus Professor Ken Dutton
WARDEN OF CONVOCATION

The University of Newcastle Fanfares

In mid-1994, staff and students of the University's Faculty of Music were invited to submit entries for a competition to compose the University Fanfares. The composition had to be capable of being performed either on organ or on brass.

The winning entry by Professor Robert Constable, was first played publicly at the University's overseas graduation ceremony held in Singapore in August 1994.

The Fanfares are performed at all ceremonial functions to herald the entry and departure of the Chancellor and other members of the Council.
The graduation ceremony is one of great antiquity. Its essential features have been the same since the 12th century when the first universities came into existence. Its necessary constituents are the Chancellor or his or her deputy, the academic staff, the graduates, and the public.

The church had a monopoly of education, partly because it was the guardian of true doctrine, and partly because clerics were almost the only people who could read and write. As a result, the only person who could license a teacher was the bishop of a diocese until, under pressure of other business, he deputed the task to his chief secretary or Chancellor.

As learning spread, teachers wanted a licence to teach not just in one diocese, but everywhere, and the only person who could give them that was the Pope. The Chancellor's authority, then, came from the Pope. But at the Reformation, Henry VIII assumed for the Crown all the rights which had previously been the Pope's in England. That is why all subsequent universities in England have been created by Royal Charter. It is for this reason also that the Chancellor does not wear ecclesiastical robes, as would have been worn in the Middle Ages, but robes similar to those of the Lord Chancellor of England.

The second group participating in the ceremony is the academic staff. In the 12th century they would all have been called "masters" or MAs. At that date they were paid no salaries, but hired their own lecture rooms and charged their own fees. But they also formed themselves into a guild or union, which is what universitas originally meant. As in all guilds they were insistent that they, and only they, should determine who should be of their number, and since this involved saying who should be teachers, they soon found themselves in conflict with the Chancellor. In the 13th century they won a great victory when they persuaded the Pope to decree that Chancellors were obliged to confer degrees on all those nominated by the masters. That is why the masters examine the candidates, why the Dean, acting as their spokesperson, reads out the names of those who are to receive degrees, and why the masters at this ceremony watch to see that the Chancellor or his Deputy does what is required of him.

Thirdly the graduates. The word "degree" comes from the Latin gradus, which means "a step". When students are admitted to a Bachelor degree they move one step up towards the mastership. When they are admitted to a master's degree they climb another step and come up on a level with the masters, who then receive them into their guild or universitas. In the Middle Ages they would then have stayed on the dais, so that their old master could invest them with the symbols of office. But that was only part of the business. The new master had to deliver an inaugural lecture, entertain the whole guild of masters to dinner and preside over disputations for forty days continuously. For that reason, taking one's master's degree was called "inception", or the beginning of one's career as a master.

The public is the fourth participant. It has an important function because the whole point of the proceedings is that they should be seen and heard by valid witnesses. The public hears the words of the Dean and the Chancellor and sees the new graduates dressed in their respective gowns or robes.

The academic gowns are derived from the everyday dress of the medieval clergy. In the Middle Ages they were not open in front, but closed like a clergyman's cassock. It was in about 1500 that academics had the front opened up so as to display the fine clothes which they were wearing underneath. The hood was the normal medieval headwear, but it soon acquired a coloured lining. By the 17th century, if not earlier, these colours were strictly controlled so that anyone could identify from the colour of a graduate's hood, the university and the degree.

The foregoing is an adaptation of an Address given at a Graduation Ceremony at the University of Birmingham by Emeritus Professor R H C Davis and reprinted in his book From Alfred the Great to Stephen (Hambledon Press 1991), pp. 307-309. It is reproduced with kind permission of the author's widow.
ADVANCE
AUSTRALIA FAIR

Australians all let us rejoice,
For we are young and free;
We've golden soil and wealth for toil;
Our home is girt by sea;
Our land abounds in nature's gifts,
Of beauty rich and rare;
In history's page, let every stage
Advance Australia Fair.
In joyful strains then let us sing
Advance Australia Fair.

The Great Hall

Most Graduation Ceremonies held by the University of Newcastle within Australia are held in the Great Hall. It was designed by architects Ancher Mortlock Murray and Woolley and officially opened in 1973. More than half of the cost was donated by the community in response to an appeal launched by the then Lord Mayor, Alderman Frank Purdue.

The auditorium seats 1450 people and the stage can accommodate a full symphony orchestra. The stepped ceiling rises to over 19 metres and is lined with brush-box timber from the NSW North Coast.

The stainless steel emblem of the University's Coat of Arms was made by the Sydney designer Michael Santry, and the Hunter Tapestry was designed and created by Mary and Larry Beetson. Its theme is the Hunter Valley and the events which have shaped it over the millennia.

The University Medal

The award of a University Medal is a rare honour made only when there is a candidate of sufficient merit.

To be considered for this award, a graduate must have a consistent record of exceptional academic achievement at all levels of a bachelor's degree program, and qualify for a bachelor's degree with first class honours.
