Singapore Chinese Orchestra Concert Hall
(The Conference Hall)
The Arms of the University of Newcastle

The Arms of the University, granted in 1965, are based on the family crest of Lieutenant John Shortland, RN who charted the entrance to the Hunter River where Newcastle now stands. The suburb in which the University is established and its surrounds were first settled by Aboriginal people of the Awabakal Tribe. Initially, the name "Shortland" was given to the suburb. In 1992, both the campus and the surrounding suburb were formally given the name "Callaghan", in honour of the late Sir Bede Callaghan, the Chancellor of the University from 1977 until 1989.

For those interested in heraldry, the University Arms are described officially as: Azure a Sea Horse naiant in dexter chief a representation of the constellation of the Southern Cross of five Mules all Argent.

The University of Newcastle Fanfares

In mid-1994, staff and students of the University's Faculty of Music were invited to submit entries for a competition to compose the University Fanfares. The composition had to be capable of being performed either on organ or on brass.

The winning entry by Professor Robert Constable, was first played publicly at the University's overseas graduation ceremony held in Singapore in August 1994.

The Fanfares are performed at all ceremonial functions to herald the entry and departure of the Chancellor and other members of the Council.

Message from the Vice-Chancellor and President

Dear Graduates, Family Members and Friends,

Congratulations! The University of Newcastle is proud to honour the achievements of its graduates in today's ceremonies. These ceremonies recognise a large number of graduates including those who have studied in one of the University's quality offshore programs.

Undertaking university studies involves a commitment over a considerable period and each of you will have a well-deserved sense of achievement at having successfully completed your chosen program. The qualifications that you have gained through the University of Newcastle will stand you in good stead for any path that you may choose in the future as they represent quality in teaching and learning.

In recent times, the nature of higher education has changed rapidly, not only as a result of the globalisation of our endeavours, but also as students recognise the importance of upgrading skills and capabilities, expanding knowledge and enhancing career prospects. As such, students now enrol at different stages in their lives and may also find themselves re-entering universities as part of a lifelong learning process. Study brings with it a diversity of academic and social experiences, all of which serve to broaden our horizons, intellectually, personally and in employment.

Another focus of universities that has become increasingly important is that of alumni relations. The University of Newcastle's alumni in Singapore and throughout Asia are widely recognised as successful leaders and achievers in business, industry, government and the professions. As a graduate of the University of Newcastle, your degree entitles you to join this international network. It will open your eyes to just how far a Newcastle degree can take you. You have access to a community that will allow you to maintain links to Newcastle, no matter where you are in the world. The quality of this network of colleagues and contacts attests to the standards of excellence set by the University, particularly in terms of international education and partnerships. Therefore, strongly encourage you to contribute to and strengthen our alumni relations by keeping in touch and participating in the wide range of activities that Alumni Chapters offer.

Finally, you have made a unique contribution to the University of Newcastle and we appreciate the opportunity you have given us to enrich our own experiences, academically, culturally and socially. The University has benefited from your participation in its programs and activities, and I hope you have found your own experience as a student most rewarding and fulfilling.

Congratulations on your achievements and we wish you continued success and good luck in the future.

Message from the President of Alumni and Warden of Convocation

Dear Graduate,

As President of Alumni and Warden of Convocation at the University of Newcastle, I am pleased to welcome you to these bodies and hope that you will find value in maintaining an ongoing and interactive relationship with other graduates, staff, students and friends of the University. Although you have been a member of our alumni since you first enrolled as a student, your graduation means that you are now also considered a member of Convocation.

Your role as a graduate is a very important one which has the potential to benefit you as an individual and also the University of Newcastle on an ongoing basis. You will have access to the University’s network of alumni which now consists of almost 100,000 people who are spread across Australia and throughout the world. Keeping in touch will provide you with opportunities to enhance your career, demonstrate your commitment to lifelong learning and importantly, to maintain the social contacts and friendships that you no doubt formed during your university studies. I therefore strongly encourage you to update the University as frequently as possible and to participate actively in an Alumni Chapter based in your city or country.

Another significant function of graduate associations is to represent graduates in the future management and directions of the University. Alumni groups are encouraged to have a strong and active voice both within and outside the University to ensure that the interests of graduates continue to be served, and also that the value of the qualifications obtained through the University are safeguarded and promoted.

If you wish to receive further information about Alumni and Convocation, or have changed your contact details, please contact:
